Sinbad did in fact have a run-in with a Roc. I'd like to see ursilla between a Rock and a hard place or as you implied chained to a Roc. You have to wonder, though not for long, what goes on in the minds of people like drusilla, you and Billy being drafted and my medical deferment [bad eyes] must make us in her, jundiced view, second class citizens compared to her son, dum. I think something has been pecking at ursilla's brain since she was dropped from the womb. It would be funny if she were one of my nephew's neighbors [he practices law in DC and lives in one of the 'burbs]. Next time you bump into the nit you might suggest he look-up griski maybe the could join up and, "practice" together. Could we sic the anti-defamation league [the jewish Gestapo] on ursilla for mentioning "Allen hiding his jewishness"??? Is that a sort of defamation.

The venerable tax lawyer in, "Happy Knoll" the one that puts-down Bob Lawton [nit] who might he have been at Bull's Eye? Theo Brazeau might have been to mild. By the way looking against that photo of the 50's circa Rapids bar, Dick Brazeau and BC didn't seem to resemble each other too much, but Dave and Bill may have looked more like their uncle. Does Nick look like BC?

Was the Roc the bird that did in Sinbad the Sailor? The Roc should carry her off to California and drop her over the LaBrea tarpits. It would put her on the left coast in perpetuity with the other wackos. Paul Miller ran off to Canada and nologic had the temerity to suggest to me that I did not serve the US of A since I was drafted! Instead of a tarpit, maybe we can have John Frost paly a cameo role as Zeus and have drusilla chained to a rock and have Roc gnaw her liver each day. How could we tell the roc from drusilla the harpie? What about Roc rights? Maybe nit and griski will file a class action on behalf of similarly situated rocks-the ones that fill their heads!

ursilla nologic and her son dum must really be a pair. As they say in the South, she must be several bricks shy of a load, or she doesn't have both feet on the ground. Has she ever met dank apple, another queen of self-aggrandizement. ursilla's mother must have been having a ma-ko-ko day when she hatched ursilla. Would that the hawk had been big enough to fly off with ursilla, maybe we can hope the all the ROC's are not extinct, one of them could handle her in a heart beat. And if he lost his grip maybe it would be over a tar-pit.

Lincoln High Newsletter

Memories of then! News of now!

Ursula (Kochanowski) Nogic (65) unogic@yahoo.com writes:

Kent -
News about Dom's deployment status - for those who've been following his tours in war zones .

Dear Kent,

I don't know about anyone else, but I found the letter that Gary Flaminio sent last week very disturbing. I feel it was bad judgment to publish a piece so full of ignorance, intolerance and hatred. Notice in the second sentence that she (the writer) blames Islamic people for 9/11, when we all know that extremists are the ones that orchestrated the terrorism. I think spreading letters like this on the internet is very dangerous. I find a letter like this so disturbing that I delete it immediately much like I would unwanted pornography. I felt I had to make my objection to it known.

Ursula unogic@yahoo.com also sends the following:

Time to Cool the Rhetoric

Something macabre about a white pigeon picking grass seed around the corner in front of my neighbor's house yesterday morning. We live in a pretty posh DC 'burb, not known as a pigeon friendly place. Later, stranger still, on another corner, I sighted a macaca looking animal zealously guarding what appeared to be a plastic bag of goodies. Its whole body was elongated at attention and his head and beady eyes were darting left and right. A huge cement mixer truck turning the corner in an asphalt shaking rumble broke our stupor and activated the macaca. Lo and behold, it took wing with the white plastic bag in the grip of its mighty talons. Reality set in. The plastic bag was that white pigeon from a few minutes before and the monkey animal morphed before my eyes into a fierce hawk. 'Wow,' I thought. 'How brutal.'

As I continued walking my dog, the image of that long legged hawk guarding its kill burrowed further into my mind as disturbing things often do in search of deeper meaning. It finally clicked as I remembered my Father (biological) and his biblically inspired view of the world. The hawk instantly transformed in my imagination into an eagle and the pigeon into a white dove and rendered my spine cold with memories of my father's dire predictions of the end of times in our lifetimes. He didn't live to see it happen, but in that fleet moment, I began to wonder whether I might.

My thoughts jumped to this morning's paper and its headlines of Chavez at the UN calling Bush the devil, not once, but 8 times during his turn at bat. Another headline found Pope Benedict taking it on the chin for an arcane reference to the evils of Islam. Senator George Allen was having another one of his personal macaca moments for hiding his Jewishness the day before. I coupled these stories to the recent references about the fight of civilizations - of good prevailing over evil and again, I got scared. Rhetoric quickly escalates and turns normally rational people into passionate reactors. Remember the soccer world cup? Lost because an ethnic slur caused the star Italian player to lose his head, or should I say, use his head, to head butt the opponent who probably reasoned afterward that a broken rib was worth the championship.

Head butts can be life threatening indeed. But world powers a click away from shooting off gigantic nuclear bombs as threats and accusations escalate can be planet annihilating. I urge us all to go easy on the rhetoric. As foreboding as are the predictions of our environmental biological clocks winding down fast, I'd like to at least have a chance at helping save our planet from our excesses. Nuclear exchanges won't allow me that opportunity.

Editor's note: I had to look up macaca -
